

Faculty Employment Opportunity

- POSITION: ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF ANTHROPOLOGY: The Department of Anthropology, Geography, and Ethnic Studies invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track appointment at the rank of Assistant Professor, with specific emphasis on applied medical anthropology and global health. The person appointed to this position will teach at the lower and upper division levels, including courses such as: Introduction to Cultural Anthropology, Anthropology and Global Issues, Applied Anthropology and Social Change, Ethnomedical Anthropology, and The World in Change, as well as regional and topical courses in the candidate's areas of specialization within medical anthropology. Additional duties may include on-line teaching and distance learning courses. Other responsibilities include recruiting, advising, and mentoring undergraduate students. Effective teaching, scholarly productivity and service to the University are required for retention, promotion, and tenure. This is an academic year appointment and contingent upon the availability of authorized funding. Candidates should have an active research agenda and be able to integrate their research interests with student learning. This may include providing local research opportunities for undergraduates, developing innovative, active learning pedagogies with high-impact practices, and working with a diverse student body, many of whom represent the first generation in their family to attend college. Candidates should expect to develop new courses in their area of expertise to enrich the curriculum, be receptive to exploring connections between Anthropology and other disciplines, and eager to seek extramural funding for research, scholarly, and creative activities.
- MINIMUM QUALIFICATIONS: A Ph.D. in Anthropology at the time of hire and evidence of effective university-level teaching are required.
- PREFERRED QUALIFICATIONS: The successful candidate will be a medical anthropologist with a strong grounding in cultural anthropology who can make foundational contributions in key areas such as public health, migrant health, ethnomedicine, social epidemiology, medical pluralism, environment and health, structural inequalities in health, and sustainable development. The ideal candidate will utilize a mixed-methods approach to field research, employing both qualitative ethnographic and quantitative methods. The candidate will have a regional concentration outside of Latin America and Southeast Asia, with a preference for specialization in Africa, the Middle East/SW Asia, Europe, or diaspora populations resident in California's Central Valley. The candidate will bring both global and local perspectives in medical anthropology, with the ability to apply global experience to local contexts in the ethnically diverse Central Valley and develop collaborative and participatory relationships to facilitate student research, service learning, and internships with local community and government health agencies. A background in public health, demonstrated through employment history or a Master's in Public Health (MPH), is preferred.
- HOW TO APPLY & DEADLINE: A complete application must include: an application letter that specifically addresses the position description and qualifications; unofficial photocopies of graduate transcripts; a curriculum vitae that includes the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of three references; and evidence of teaching effectiveness. Official transcripts will be required at the time of hire. Screening of applications will begin immediately and completed applications received by December 3, 2018, will be given full consideration. The position will remain open until filled. This appointment begins on August 19, 2019.

CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CLEARANCE NOTICE

The university requires a criminal and/or child abuse background check to be completed for many of its new employees, current employees seeking promotional or transfer opportunities, and current employees assigned new duties. Satisfactory completion of a background check (including a criminal records check) is required for employment. CSU will make a conditional offer of employment, which may be rescinded if the background check reveals disqualifying information, and/or it is discovered that the candidate knowingly withheld or falsified information. Failure to satisfactorily complete the background check may affect the continued employment of a current CSU employee who was conditionally offered the position. Failure to consent to any background check will disqualify an applicant from further consideration. Additionally, an applicant who fails to provide the necessary information or who provides false or misleading information may also be disqualified from further consideration. Later discovery of false or misleading information related to the background check may result in the offer of employment being withdrawn or subject the employee to disciplinary action, up to and including termination.
