Semester: Spring 2017

Course Description. Techniques of illustrating to include rough drafts and pencil drawings, ink renderings, graphs, maps, lettering, etc., with emphasis placed on biological materials.

Textbook. No text required. Suggested reading:

1. The Handbook of Scientific Illustration. 2003. Edited by Elaine R. S Hodges, with Steve Buchanan, John Cody and Trudy Nicholson. John Wiley & Sons, Inc. New Jersey, USA.
2. Scientific Illustration. 1994. Phyllis Wood. John Wiley & Sons, Inc. New Jersey, USA.

Student Learning Outcomes. Upon successful completion of the course, students should be able to:

- A. Create Illustrations using contour line, stippling, hatching and cross-hatching.
- B. Develop a working knowledge of tools/mediums of the trade such as graphite, pen and ink.
- C. Ability to draw and scan illustrations to a digital format for publication.
- D. Understanding of the illustration process including research, layout, initial sketch and finished drawing; emphasis on effective scientific communication.
- E. Follow the history of scientific illustration into the modern profession it is today.

Attendance. Attendance is mandatory. As most instruction will be given at the start of class, punctuality is a must. Three absences will be allotted for unforeseen circumstances and will not affect student grade. Two late occurrences will result in one absence. Any additional absence will deduct student grade by one letter (4 absences = B; 5 absences = C etc.).

Assignments. Assignments will be given every week, ranging from sketches to finished drawings in a variety of techniques and materials. Due dates will be given in class. Assignments may include: bones, plants, insects, shells, mammals, birds etc. Assignments will be evaluated by the following criteria:

Effective Communication. Does the drawing successfully convey information conducive to scientific understanding (identification, natural process, function...)

Accuracy of Subject. Are proportions, colors and details of the subject accurate?

Effort/Improvement. How much time and research are put into the development process of a drawing and the finished drawing itself? Is their noticeable improvement in technique, composition or process?

Effective use of Technique/Presentation. Is the artwork clean and professionally presented? Are techniques effective in conveying subject? Are the techniques properly applied?

Grading. Grading will be on a credit/no credit basis. To receive credit, a student must complete all the assignments and meet the attendance requirements as stated in the syllabus. Feedback on individual assignments will facilitate improvement.

Academic Integrity. See Student Code of Conduct in Catalog.

Disability Resource Services. By university commitment and by law, students with disabilities are entitled to participate in academic activities and to be tested in a manner that accurately assesses their knowledge and skills. They also may qualify for particular accommodations that ensure equal access to lectures, labs, films, and other class-related activities. Contact Disability Resource Services at Ext. 3159 or information about making accommodations.
