Pedagogy Invited Talk

Presentation to CSU Stanislaus Quality Online Learning & Teaching participants in Winter 2014 cohort on pedagogy and online teaching tools utilized in PADM 5950, "Social Justice in Public Affairs," December 11, 2014

Service Learning as a Pedagogical Tool

- Stockton General Plan Update service learning project; January – May 2015
Working with community partners including the Stockton Diocese Environmental Justice Center and the American Farmland Trust, students in PADM 5710 completed an intensive research project to vet the City of Stockton's proposed General Plan Update, interview stakeholders, and make recommendations based on current research
- Pedal Revolution service learning project; January 2013 – May 2015
Students completed an extensive research project in which administrators in 30 California cities were interviewed regarding policies undertaken to encourage cycling and provide active transportation infrastructure
- Smart Valley Places service learning project; January – May 2012
Students identified best practices and key equity concerns in six core areas of local interest to California's Central Valley: local government and sustainable communities; land use and sustainable communities; housing and community development; local and regional transportation; water and wastewater management; and environmental equity

- Benson-Ames Alliance service learning project; January – May 2010
In conjunction with the UNO Neighborhood Center, Benson Neighborhood Association, and students in PA 4200, Community Organizing & Social Change, completed a “Neighborhood Scan” in which students identified zoning code violations in a neighborhood in transition. The class worked with and empowered the neighborhood association to meliorate and find long-lasting solutions for the violations, representing grass-roots community development.
