-Personal Statement

The M.S. Behavior Analysis Program, while preparing graduates for careers in applied settings, is founded upon theoretical, conceptual, and experimental aspects of behavior analysis. In order to help determine if you are a good match for the M.S. Behavior Analysis program at California State University, Stanislaus we would like to ask you some questions about your interest in the field. Please note that we are well aware that many students apply to the program with limited formal training in either the experimental or applied analysis of behavior.

Please write a personal statement that includes the following information:

- Please tell us about your interest in behavior analysis and why you are pursuing graduate training in this specialty.
- Tell us about your academic, research, and applied experiences as they relate to your interest in and understanding of behavior analysis. Identify specific readings you have done in the area.
