The community surrounding California State University, Stanislaus is indeed diverse. Though I have only been here for one semester and currently serving my second semester, I've seen the diversity that Stanislaus has to offer. One of the reasons why I decided to transfer here from Merced College was because of <sup>the</sup> diversity of California State University, Stanislaus, which is somewhat similar to Merced College. I do however have two recommendations that might help California State University, Stanislaus be more like my ideal campus concerning diversity.

In my own opinion, a diverse campus must have a variety of ethnicity ranging from the lower class to the ~~upper~~ upper-class economically. My ideal campus consists of a variety of races and social and economical status. Whether a person is rich, poor, white or black, I believe an ideal campus must have ~~it~~ it all for it to be fully diverse. With a diverse campus, often ~~times~~ comes ~~with~~ discrimination, ~~that~~ which brings me to my first recommendation that can help California State University, Stanislaus be more like my ideal campus.

The first recommendation that I offer is the promotion and welcoming of different races or ethnic group to join a different ethnic club. For example, the Asian club can allow and welcome people of different race to join the club. I believe by doing this, not only will the campus be more diverse but the clubs and programs that the school offer would also be diverse. From my observation when I first transfer here I notice that Homong club didn't have many if none of the other ethnic group as a member. I also notice that when I approached them to buy an egg-roll for lunch they offer to ~~see~~ if me to join but they didn't ask any of the other ethnic group that were also buying their products to join. I believe that a person no matter their skin color should be look at from a college student perspective and not be judge by their skin color. If I was given an opportunity to join a club, I believe a person who is different should also be given the same opportunity also. An ethnic club should promote people to join no matter what the differences are because I believe that ethnic clubs ~~should~~ be there for the reasons of educating and showing other the importance of diversity. <sup>Through</sup> ~~Not only~~ by promoting and allowing others to join a certain ethnic club, the campus can help eliminate or decrease the discrimination that exist on campus at the same time help maintain or even increase the diversity of the schools.

The other recommendation that I have to offer to help California State University, Stanislaus be more like my ideal campus is to open a wider window of opportunities, such as scholarships and student aid. One of the reasons why I believe the campus is not as diverse as it can be is because a lot of students can't afford to go to school. Scholarships can help students from low income families to go to school. There are scholarships that Stanislaus offer and there are also loans, but what teachers and counselors don't know is that the majority of the students who need the scholarship the most doesn't know that it exists. From my ~~own~~ own personal experiences, I didn't know anything about scholarships. When I first started college the only thing that the advisors at school tell me about was financial aid which barely cover my tuition and books. Most students especially graduating seniors from high school know about scholarship and even if they do, it's usually the ones with the best grades that qualify. I believe that giving an equal opportunity to all students the campus can be more diverse, allowing students from all social and economical status to go to school. I have a friend who wants to go to college but couldn't because he has to work to feed his family. I Also believe that by giving more aids and scholarship you might even increase the male students population on campus. I know that a lot of budgets are being cut and there aren't ~~a~~ a lot money for scholarships, but where there's a will, there's a way.

My ideal campus concerning diversity is a campus that has a wide variety of ethnic groups and a wide variety of people from all social and economical status. As we all know, the world is not perfect and there may not be such a thing as an ideal diverse campus. With this said, however, I truly do believe we can make California State University, Stanislaus be more like an ~~that~~ ideal campus if we try. The two recommendation that I offer is not bullet proof and ~~a~~ has not been proven, but I believe it is worth a try. To make the campus more diverse we must at least try.
